FINAL NOTICE

To: Mr Colin Jackson      To: Baronworth (Investment Services) Limited
(in liquidation)
FSA      FRN: 115284
Reference
Number: CPJ00002
Date: 19 December 2012

ACTION

1. For the reasons given in this notice, and pursuant to section 56 of the Act, the FSA has decided to:
  - (i) withdraw Mr Jackson's approval to perform controlled functions at Baronworth pursuant to section 63 of the Act; and
  - (ii) prohibit Mr Jackson from performing any significant influence function (as defined in the FSA Handbook) at any authorised or exempt person or exempt professional firm, other than as, or through, an appointed representative within the meaning of the Act, on the basis that he is not a fit and proper person because he lacks competence and capability to perform such a function.

SUMMARY OF REASONS

2. During the relevant period Mr Jackson was the principal shareholder and chief executive of Baronworth. Mr Jackson also held several other significant influence functions at the Firm namely, CF1 (Director), CF10 (Compliance oversight) and CF11 (Money laundering reporting).

3. Baronworth's business model mainly related to it, and its appointed representative, drafting, approving and sending by post financial promotions for a variety of high income products to its customers on a direct offer and non-advised basis. The FSA has found that during the relevant period Baronworth's financial promotions failed to comply with the applicable regulatory standards, in that they were not fair, clear and not misleading and that Mr Jackson was directly responsible for this failure. This is due to the fact that Mr Jackson was solely responsible for drafting and approving direct offer financial promotions within the Firm.
4. In particular, the financial promotions drafted and approved by Mr Jackson for Baronworth failed to meet the FSA's fair, clear and not misleading criteria in the following respects:
  - (i) the financial promotions frequently lacked appropriate balance as they emphasised the potential benefits of the proposed investment without giving equal prominence to the consequent risks;
  - (ii) the financial promotions included statements such as "100% capital protection at maturity" which were not supported by the literature from the product providers;
  - (iii) the financial promotions frequently failed to set out in clear terms charges that would be incurred by any customer purchasing the investment;
  - (iv) the financial promotions often contained inadequate information about the nature and the risk of the investment; and
  - (v) a number of financial promotions did not contain accurate or sufficient information on the recourse available to customers under the Financial Services Compensation Scheme.

5. Baronworth also received complaints from customers arising from its financial promotions issued during the relevant period and particularly in relation to the ESB ISA, a financial promotion issued to its customers in 1999. In this regard, the FSA has further found that Baronworth failed to handle a significant proportion of these complaints appropriately and in compliance with the applicable regulatory standards. The FSA has concluded that Mr Jackson was directly accountable for this failure as well. This is due to the fact that Mr Jackson alone handled complaints within Baronworth without any input from anyone else including the other approved persons within the Firm, Michael Brill and Robert Jackson.
6. Finally, as an FSA approved person holding a number of significant influence functions at Baronworth, including that of chief executive, Mr Jackson failed to ensure that his Firm had appropriate systems and controls in place to run its business in compliance with regulatory standards. In particular:
  - (i) it had no controls in place to ensure that the financial promotions, drafted and approved by Mr Jackson, satisfied the relevant regulatory requirements;
  - (ii) it had no formal complaints handling procedure in place;
  - (iii) it had no procedures in place to manage conflicts of interest in that Mr Jackson handled complaints about financial promotions he had personally drafted and approved; and
  - (iv) the lack of effective systems and controls contributed to Baronworth failing to address the substance of complaints.

FACTS AND MATTERS

Background to Baronworth

8. Baronworth was incorporated in September 1985. It was authorised by the FSA on 1 December 2001 to undertake regulated activities. Mr Jackson was Baronworth’s 50% shareholder and controlling director and carried out the majority of the regulated activities within the Firm.
9. The Firm has had five appointed representatives since its incorporation and these were set up to carry out different types of businesses in the financial services Baronworth intended to operate in. However, a number of these appointed representatives have not traded since they were established. The majority of the regulated activity of the Firm relates to direct offer financial promotion business, with all transactions carried out on a non-advised basis. This business was conducted exclusively through the Firm’s appointed representative, Baronworth Investments, whose 50% shareholder and controlling director was Mr Jackson.
10. The Firm and Baronworth Investments both operated, in practice, as a one man band. Mr Jackson carried out research into investment products and decided upon the products Baronworth would promote by way of direct offer marketing to its retail customers. The investment products tended to be high income investment products. Mr Jackson also drafted and approved the financial promotions without any input from the other approved persons in the Firm.

11. Mr Jackson also dealt with the complaints received by the Firm solely and regardless of whether they were about the financial promotions drafted and approved by him. The other approved persons at the Firm were not involved in the complaint process and appear not to have taken an active involvement in the running of the Firm.

Financial Promotions

12. During the relevant period Baronworth Investments issued 74 financial promotions to its customers. The Firm's procedure in relation to this business involved Baronworth Investments (i.e. Mr Jackson) drafting the financial promotions, Baronworth (i.e. Mr Jackson) approving the financial promotions and Baronworth Investments sending out the approved financial promotions, on a direct offer basis, to a core group of around 550 customers. These customers had purchased financial products through the Baronworth Group in the relatively recent past. When a customer bought a product as a result of this direct offer, Baronworth received commission from the relevant product provider, which it then shared with the relevant customer.
13. COB 3.8.4R(1) and COBS 4.2.1R require a firm to ensure that its financial promotions are fair, clear and not misleading. The FSA has found that a substantial number of the financial promotions drafted and approved by Mr Jackson on behalf of Baronworth and Baronworth Investments during the relevant period failed to comply with these requirements. These are discussed below.

(a) Lack of appropriate balance between risk and reward

14. The financial promotions frequently did not provide a fair and adequate description of the risks involved in investing in the product. They lacked appropriate balance in that the financial promotions heavily promoted the potential benefits of the investment without giving equal prominence to the potential risks.

15. This breaches the FSA's fair, clear and not misleading rule in relation to financial promotions, which requires a financial promotion to include a fair and adequate description of the nature of the investment or service and the risks involved. In order to give an adequate explanation of the investment the promotion must avoid accentuating the potential benefits without also giving a fair indication of the risks.
16. For example, the financial promotion for the Pinnacle Insurance Guaranteed Annual Income Bond in October 2002 did not set out the risk of capital loss upon early encashment/cancellation although it strongly emphasised the 'guaranteed' nature of the investment.
17. A number of investment products promoted by Baronworth Investments involved the risk of loss of the customer's initial capital invested. The FSA has found that several of the promotional letters did not disclose this risk appropriately. For example, in the financial promotion for the Keydata Protected Portfolio Plan in August 2006, whilst the risk of capital loss was described within the KFD, it was not included as a main point within the financial promotion itself. On the contrary, the financial promotion heavily promoted the potential benefit of "100% Capital Protection at Maturity".
18. This is in breach of the FSA's fair, clear and not misleading rule which requires firms to identify where there is a possibility of loss of initial capital invested and to disclose this as one of the main points in the specific non-real time financial promotion.

(b) Failure to provide adequate explanation of the nature of products

19. During the relevant period Baronworth issued financial promotions for a number of complex structured products which failed to include an adequate explanation of the nature of those products. This was important given that the Firm's mailing distribution list mainly consisted of retail clients.
20. For example, the Structured Solutions Group Capital Protected Income Plan in January 2007 was a relatively complex structured investment product where income was based upon the performance of the underlying fund. The financial promotion did not provide an adequate explanation as to how the investment would work in practice. Instead of this, it quoted target income rates and made ambiguous statements, such as, “the potential of rising income” and “the possibility of a terminal bonus”, without any qualification or explanation of the risks involved in attempting to achieve these aims.

21. This was in breach of the relevant regulatory standards which provide that it cannot be assumed that recipients necessarily have an understanding of the investment or service being promoted. The use of terms that are ambiguous, or the targeting of an audience which is unlikely to understand the financial promotion, are matters which are relevant to an assessment of whether the promotion is 'fair, clear and not misleading'. If a non-real time financial promotion is specially designed for a targeted collection of recipients who are reasonably believed to have particular knowledge of the investment or service being promoted, this fact should be made clear.
22. There was no such indication that this promotion had been targeted at a particular sector of the Firm's client base. Moreover Baronworth's mailing distribution list consisted mainly of retail clients and all resulting business was on a non-advised basis. Under these circumstances the FSA found that the financial promotion was in breach of the fair, clear and not misleading rule.

(c) Lack of information on charges

23. On a number of occasions Baronworth's financial promotions did not set out adequate and clear information on the charges and expenses involved with the investment. In some instances the financial promotions did not contain any such information at all. This is a breach of the relevant regulatory requirement according to which a direct offer financial promotion must detail the basis or amount of any charges and expenses which the private customer may bear.

(d) Lack of accurate or sufficient information on the recourse under FSCS

24. A number of Baronworth's financial promotions did not contain accurate or sufficient information on the recourse available to the customers under the FSCS.
25. For example, the financial promotion for the Walker Crips FTSE Kick-Out Plan in May 2010 failed to include a risk warning that, in the event of the issuer's insolvency, the investor would not have any recourse to the FSCS. Although this information was included in the KFD this should have been set out clearly as a main point in the letter as it was a crucial risk warning.

Financial Promotions: Conclusion

26. Mr Jackson, acting in a position of significant influence and as the person solely responsible for drafting and approving the financial promotions for his Firm was directly accountable for these breaches. Furthermore, the Firm's lack of appropriate systems and controls during the majority of the relevant period contributed to these breaches. In this regard Mr Jackson has acknowledged that his Firm did not have any formal procedure for drafting and communicating financial promotions.
27. Mr Jackson has also confirmed that the majority of the Firm's financial promotions were carried out at a time when Baronworth did not have any formal compliance and monitoring procedures in place. Mr Jackson stated that he sought to obtain approval of the financial promotions from the relevant product providers. However, this was not by itself sufficient in order for him and his Firm to comply with regulatory requirements, given that the product providers could not have been responsible for ensuring that the Firm's financial promotions were compliant with the relevant regulatory standards.
28. As a result, Baronworth had no controls in place to ensure that Mr Jackson, who drafted and approved the financial promotions on his own, was complying with the regulatory requirements for financial promotions. This failure was attributable to Mr Jackson who, acting alone, made the decisions on what products Baronworth would promote by way of direct offer marketing and how they would be promoted.

29. This failure was serious on the part of Mr Jackson because he was both the chief executive of Baronworth and the appointed compliance officer for the Firm. In both these significant influence functions he failed to take steps to ensure that his Firm had appropriate systems and controls in place to issue financial promotions which were fair, clear and not misleading and complied with the relevant regulatory standards.

Complaints Handling

30. Mr Jackson alone handled complaints received by the Firm.
31. During the relevant period Baronworth and Baronworth Investments received a total of 95 complaints. 39 of these complaints were referred to the FOS and 14 were upheld against Baronworth; all of these related to a financial promotion for the ESB ISA sent out to customers in 1999. The substance of the customers' cause for complaint in relation to this financial promotion was consistent (namely the wording of the financial promotion) and the main finding of the FOS relating to these complaints was that the Firm's financial promotions on the ESB ISA were not fair, clear and not misleading.
32. The ESB ISA financial promotions were drafted, approved and sent to customers prior to the relevant period. Accordingly, the wording of this financial promotion (a relevant extract is contained in paragraph 39) does not form part of the FSA's action in this matter. However, the Firm's complaint handling arising from the ESB ISA customers' complaints arose after FSA regulation and therefore is relevant.
33. In relation to its handling of the ESB ISA complaints, Baronworth consistently failed to deal with the substance of the complaints and dismissed them solely on the basis that it had carried out the transactions on an 'execution only' (i.e. non-advised) basis. Many of these complaints did not relate to whether the customer received poor advice.

34. Mr Jackson handled a significant proportion of the Firm's complaints in breach of several DISP rules as follows:

- (i) Mr Jackson handled complaints on his own, even though some of the complaints concerned financial promotions which he had drafted, approved and sent out himself. Mr Jackson therefore had an obvious conflict of interest in handling complaints about his own work (DISP 1.2.16R (in force from 2002-2007) and DISP 1.4.1R (in force from 2008 to the end of the relevant period)); and
- (ii) during the majority of the relevant period Baronworth did not have a written internal complaints handling procedure (DISP 1.2.1R; 1.2.9R (in force from 2002-2007) and DISP 1.3.1R, 1.2.1R (in force from 2008 to the end of the relevant period)). This meant that there were no internal rules or guidance available for the Firm or Mr Jackson to follow when handling complaints. It also meant that Baronworth was unable to send the complaints handling procedure to customers who had complained, with the result that customers may not have been aware of the protection available to them.

35. Paragraphs 36-52 below set out the FSA's findings in relation to an example of four cases where Baronworth failed to handle the relevant customers' complaints adequately in compliance with the DISP rules applicable at the time of the complaints.

(a) Customer A

36. Anticipating a low level of capital return from his Eurolife Income or Growth Plans, Customer A wrote to Baronworth on 3 December 2003 to complain that the Firm's financial promotion overstated the security of his investments. Mr Jackson replied on 10 December 2003 stating that it was unclear to him if Customer A's letter constituted a complaint. The FSA has not found and the Firm did not produce any evidence of any further contact from Customer A to the Firm.

37. It was inappropriate for Mr Jackson not to regard Customer A's letter as a complaint. The customer was expressing dissatisfaction with the wording of the promotional literature for a product which was promoted through the Firm. For the purposes of DISP, the letter therefore qualified as a complaint.
38. This complaint was not handled properly and the Firm acted in breach of the DISP rules when dealing with it.

(b) Customer B

39. Customer B complained that he had not received the return which he expected from his investment in the ESB ISA. He complained that Baronworth's explanatory letter, on which he based his decision to invest in the ESB ISA, was misleading. It stated: "Provided the investment is held for its full term your capital will be returned in full. This investment is not linked to any index". This proved not to be the case and customers lost money. Also, the potential risks of investing in the ESB ISA were not set out in the Firm's promotional letter. Customer B considered that Baronworth had mis-sold him the product, and that it should pay him compensation.
40. Mr Jackson, on behalf of Baronworth, rejected his complaint on the basis that the transaction was carried out on an execution only basis. Customer B in turn rejected the Firm's reasoning stating that the fact remained that Baronworth in its promotional literature had misled him. In addition, Customer B asked for somebody other than Mr Jackson to consider his complaint.
41. In response Mr Jackson repeated that the transaction was carried out on an execution only basis, and that Baronworth did not give Customer B any advice. Mr Jackson did not accept that somebody else at the Firm should consider the complaint. Thereafter, Customer B referred his complaint to the FOS.
42. The FOS upheld Customer B's complaint stating that although Baronworth had not given him any advice, nonetheless the Firm had misrepresented the ESB ISA in such a way as to encourage Customer B to invest when he may not otherwise have done so. It recommended that Baronworth pay Customer B the original capital invested plus interest.

43. In a similar way to other ESB ISA complaints, Baronworth and Mr Jackson failed to deal with Customer B's complaint fairly and adequately by failing to address the subject matter of the complaint.
44. In addition, DISP 1.2.16R provides that complaints should be investigated by an employee of sufficient competence who, where appropriate, was not directly involved in the subject matter of the complaint. Mr Jackson should therefore not have investigated Customer B's complaint as he had drafted the financial promotion about which the customer was complaining. Mr Jackson also failed to comply with Customer B's reasonable request that somebody else handle the complaint.

(c) Customer C

45. Customer C wrote to Baronworth stating that the endowment plan that he and his wife had bought following a promotion by Baronworth was facing a significant shortfall. Customer C complained that their investment was entered into in 1988 on the expectation that the payout on maturity would significantly exceed the mortgage amount and that this expectation was given by Baronworth and supported by the KFD. Customer C therefore claimed that they had been mis-sold the product by Baronworth and that the Firm should pay them compensation equal to the predicted shortfall figure, which was £28,500.
46. Mr Jackson acknowledged the complaint and sought to investigate it by requesting the client to send them their file and any relevant documentation. However he ultimately rejected the complaint by stating that the policy was taken out through Baronworth Limited, a different company to Baronworth and one that was no longer trading.
47. Mr Jackson and Baronworth failed to deal with this complaint fairly and adequately. Although Baronworth Limited had had a separate legal identity and was dissolved on 18 January 2000, it had been part of the Baronworth Group under the control of two of the same directors, i.e. Mr Jackson and Robert Jackson, and had operated from the same office premises as the other companies within the Baronworth Group. In all the circumstances it is neither fair nor reasonable for the complaint to have been dismissed on this narrow basis; Mr Jackson and Baronworth failed to address the substance of the complaint.

48. The FSA has found a number of similar cases where Baronworth had dismissed complaints on the basis that the promotion was carried out by Baronworth Limited and not the Firm. It therefore appears that Baronworth has used this as a defence to these complaints and as an excuse for not addressing the substance of the complaints.

(d) Customer D

49. Customer D wrote, on behalf of herself and her husband, to Baronworth in March 2006 complaining about their loss of returns from their investment in the ESB ISA. She criticised Baronworth for promoting a sub-standard product and requested the Firm to pay compensation. Customer D emphasised that she and her husband were in their late seventies and that they were gravely affected by this loss.
50. Mr Jackson on behalf of Baronworth replied to Customer D's letter stating that he was unable to respond to her letter until she specified the nature of her complaint. Further correspondence was exchanged during which time the Firm declined to deal with the complaint on the basis that the letters failed to set out the nature of the complaint in clear terms so as to enable Baronworth to respond as required by the regulations. Customer D then sent a final letter to Baronworth stating that she was complaining against the Firm for mis-selling a product which was not suitable for her and her husband. Customer D stated that they became aware of the product and invested upon receiving the financial promotion from Baronworth which misled them regarding the security of the investment. Mr Jackson sent a further response refusing to deal with the complaint, claiming that the letter still failed to be clear on the nature of the complaint.

51. Mr Jackson, on behalf of Baronworth, failed to deal with this complaint fairly. It was inappropriate for him to refuse to deal with the complaint on the basis that Customer D's letters failed to set out the reason for their complaint adequately, especially when the final letter set out clearly why the clients felt that they were mis-sold the product by Baronworth. Mr Jackson had sufficient information to deal with the complaint adequately and therefore should have responded in full to Customer D's final letter of complaint, but he did not do so.
52. This complaint was not handled properly and constituted breaches of DISP rules. Baronworth's and Mr Jackson's failure in this case is more serious as by March 2006 Mr Jackson was well aware of their failure in relation to the ESB ISA financial promotions from several FOS rulings made against the Firm on the same issue.

Complaints Handling: Conclusion

53. Baronworth therefore, in its handling of complaints, has breached the regulatory requirements set out in DISP. Mr Jackson is accountable for the Firm's failure in this regard given that he alone handled complaints within Baronworth without any input from anyone else in the Firm.
54. Mr Jackson has told the FSA that he handled all the Firm's complaints, notwithstanding the fact that many related to financial promotions that he had both drafted and approved. This gave rise to an obvious conflict of interest in his handling complaints about his own work.
55. Mr Jackson, on behalf of the Firm, was wrong to reject complaints on the basis that the transaction was carried out on an execution only basis. Regardless as to whether the substance of the complaint was considered, it was wrong to describe the Firm's service to customers in relation to their financial promotions as 'execution only'; it was in fact 'direct offer'.
56. Mr Jackson has stated that during the majority of the relevant period his Firm did not have a written internal complaints handling procedure. In addition, no one else at Baronworth monitored how Mr Jackson handled the Firm's complaints. Baronworth had no guidance or controls in place to ensure that its complaints were handled appropriately and in compliance with regulatory standards. The lack of adequate systems and controls within Baronworth during most of the relevant period, including the absence of a formal complaints handling procedure, contributed to the Firm's failure in this regard.

57. Given Mr Jackson's significant influence functions within the Firm and his personal involvement in the conduct of its business, the Firm's failures are attributable to Mr Jackson, who failed to take reasonable steps to ensure that the Firm had appropriate systems and controls in place to handle complaints in compliance with the required regulatory standards.

FAILINGS

58. The statutory and regulatory provisions and policy relevant to this Final Notice are referred to in the Annex.

FIT 2.2-Competence and Capability

59. By reason of the facts and matters referred to in paragraphs 8-57 above, Mr Jackson is not a fit and proper person in that he lacks competence and capability.
60. Mr Jackson failed to carry out his role at Baronworth, mainly as the chief executive and compliance officer, with competence and capability and in particular by failing to take steps to ensure that his Firm's financial promotions were fair, clear and not misleading and that all complaints were handled in compliance with regulatory standards.
61. In particular Mr Jackson acted without competence and capability by:
- (i) drafting and approving direct offer financial promotions for his Firm which failed to meet the FSA's fair, clear and not misleading rule and which failed to comply with the relevant regulatory standards. The financial promotions lacked the appropriate balance between highlighting the risks and rewards of the products and often contained inadequate or inaccurate information concerning the nature and the risks of the investment;

- (ii) handling complaints on his Firm's behalf without ensuring that they were dealt with fairly and adequately and in compliance with the DISP requirements, in particular, dismissing complaints without addressing their substance;
- (iii) failing to take appropriate steps to ensure that his Firm had adequate systems and controls in place in relation to drafting and approving financial promotions;
- (iv) failing to take appropriate steps to ensure that his Firm had in place a formal and sufficient complaints handling procedure;
- (v) failing to take appropriate steps to establish a formal compliance and monitoring procedure for his Firm and failing to ensure that his business was run in compliance with regulatory standards; and
- (vi) failing to appreciate the relevant regulatory requirements for direct offer financial promotions and complaints handling.

SANCTION

Prohibition

62. Mr Jackson's failings as a significant influence functions holder undermined the protection that should have been available to ensure the fair treatment of Baronworth's customers. Having regard to his conduct and omissions as discussed above and the provisions of FIT and EG, the FSA has concluded that Mr Jackson is not a fit and proper person to perform any significant influence function or an approved function (as defined in the FSA Handbook) at any authorised or exempt person or exempt professional firm, other than as, or through, an appointed representative because he lacks competence and capability to perform such a function.

Annex

1. Relevant regulatory provisions

The Act

- 1.1 The FSA's regulatory objectives are set out in section 2(2) of the Act and include the protection of consumers.

Prohibition

- 1.2 The FSA has the power, pursuant to section 56 of the Act, to make an order prohibiting individuals from performing a specified function, any function falling within a specified description, or any function, if it appears to the FSA that he is not a fit and proper person to perform functions in relation to a regulated activity carried on by an authorised person. Such an order may relate to a specified regulated activity or any regulated activity falling within a specified description or all regulated activities.

Fit and Proper Test for Approved Persons

- 1.3 The section of the FSA handbook entitled "FIT" sets out the Fit and Proper test for Approved Persons. The purpose of FIT is to outline the main criteria for assessing the fitness and propriety of a candidate for a controlled function and FIT is also relevant in assessing the continuing fitness and propriety of an approved person.
- 1.4 FIT 1.3.1G provides that the FSA will have regard to a number of factors when assessing a person's fitness and propriety. Among the most important considerations will be the person's competence and capability.

2. Relevant Handbook provisions

Enforcement Guide

- 2.1 The FSA's approach to exercising its powers to make prohibition orders and withdraw approvals is set out at Chapter 9 of the Enforcement Guide ("EG").

- 2.2 EG 9.1 states that the FSA's power to make prohibition orders under section 56 of the Act helps it work towards achieving its regulatory objectives. The FSA may exercise this power where it considers that, to achieve any of those objectives, it is appropriate either to prevent an individual from performing any functions in relation to regulated activities or to restrict the functions which he may perform.
- 2.3 EG 9.4 sets out the general scope of the FSA's powers in this respect, which include the power to make a range of prohibition orders depending on the circumstances of each case and the range of regulated activities to which the individual's lack of fitness and propriety is relevant. EG 9.5 provides that the scope of a prohibition order will vary according to the range of functions which the individual concerned performs in relation to regulated activities, the reasons why he is not fit and proper and the severity of risk posed by him to consumers or the market generally.
- 2.4 In circumstances where the FSA has concerns about the fitness and propriety of an approved person, EG 9.8 to 9.14 provides guidance. In particular, EG 9.8 states that the FSA may consider whether it should prohibit that person from performing functions in relation to regulated activities, withdraw that person's approval or both. In deciding whether to withdraw approval and/or make a prohibition order, the FSA will consider whether its regulatory objectives can be achieved adequately by imposing disciplinary sanctions.
- 2.5 EG 9.9 states that the FSA will consider all the relevant circumstances when deciding whether to make a prohibition order against an approved person and/or to withdraw that person's approval. Such circumstances may include, but are not limited to, the following factors:
- (1) whether the individual is fit and proper to perform functions in relation to regulated activities, including in relation to the criteria for assessing the fitness and propriety of an approved person in terms of competence and capability as set out in FIT 2.2;
  - (2) the relevance and materiality of any matters indicating unfitness;

- (3) the length of time since the occurrence of any matters indicating unfitness;
- (4) the particular controlled function the approved person is (or was) performing, the nature and activities of the firm concerned and the markets in which he operates;
- (5) the severity of the risk which the individual poses to consumers and to confidence in the financial system; and
- (6) the previous disciplinary record and general compliance history of the individual.

2.6 EG 9.12 provides a number of examples of types of behaviour which have previously resulted in the FSA deciding to issue a prohibition order or withdraw the approval of an approved person. The examples include serious lack of competence.

Conduct of Business Rules

2.7 Guidance on the Conduct of Business Rules is set out in the Conduct of Business manuals of the FSA handbook.

2.8 COB was in force for part of the relevant period (until 31 October 2007), and thereafter COBS applied.

COB

2.9 COB 3.8.4R(1) states that a firm must be able to show that it has taken reasonable steps to ensure that a non-real time financial promotion is clear, fair and not misleading.

2.10 COB 3.8.5E(1) states that a firm should take reasonable steps to ensure that, for a non-real time financial promotion:

- (f) the design, content or format does not disguise, obscure or diminish the significant of any statement, warning or other matter which the financial promotion is required by this chapter to contain;
- (h) it does not omit any matters the omission of which causes the financial promotion not to be clear, fair and not misleading.

2.11 COB 3.8.7G(1) states that it cannot be assumed that recipients necessarily have an understanding of the investment or service being promoted. The use of terms that are ambiguous, or the targeting of an audience which is unlikely to understand the promotion, are matters which are relevant to an assessment of whether the promotion is 'clear, fair and not misleading'. If a non-real time financial promotion is specially designed for a targeted collection of recipients who are reasonably believed to have particular knowledge of the investment or service being promoted, this fact should be made clear.

2.12 COB 3.8.8R(1) states that a specific non-real time financial promotion must include a fair and adequate description of: (a) the nature of the investment or service; (b) the commitment required; (c) the risks involved.

2.13 COB 3.8.9G states that:

- (1) A specific non-real time financial promotion should give a fair and balanced indication of the requirements in COB 3.8.8R(1)(a) to (c), to meet COB 3.8.4R(1) (Clear, fair and not misleading rule);
- (3) In giving a fair and adequate explanation of the investment or service being promoted firms should avoid:
  - (a) accentuating the potential benefits of an investment without also giving a fair indication of the risks;
  - (c) drawing attention to a favourable tax treatment without stating that this might not continue in the future.

2.14 COB 3.8.9G(7)(b) states that in giving a fair and adequate explanation of the risk involved, firms should, where relevant identify where there is a possibility of loss of initial capital invested and disclose this as one of the main points in the specific non-real time financial promotion.

2.15 COB 3.9.6R states that:

(1) A direct offer financial promotion must be in a durable medium and contain sufficient information to enable a person to make an informed assessment of the investment or service to which it relates.

(2) In particular, a direct offer financial promotion must contain:

(b) where it is the case that no advice on investments has been given, a prominent statement that:

(i) no advice on investments has been given; and

(ii) if a person has any doubt about the suitability of the agreement which is the subject of the financial promotion he should contact the firm for advice on investments (or another appropriate firm if the firm does not offer advice on investments).

(d) details of the basis or amount of any commission or remuneration which might be payable by the person who is offering the investment or service to another person.

2.16 COB 3.9.7R(5) requires a direct offer financial promotion to detail the basis or amount of any charges and expenses which the private customer may bear.

- (2) that quotes a yield figure gives a balanced impression of both the short and long term prospects for the investment;
- (3) that promotes an investment or service whose charging structure is complex, or in relation to which the firm will receive more than one element of remuneration, includes the information necessary to ensure that it is fair, clear and not misleading and contains sufficient information taking into account the needs of the recipients;

A firm must ensure that information:

- (1) includes the name of the firm;
- (2) is accurate and in particular does not emphasise any potential benefits of relevant business or a relevant investment without also giving a fair and prominent indication of any relevant risks;
- (3) is sufficient for, and presented in a way that is likely to be understood by, the average member of the group to whom it is directed, or by whom it is likely to be received; and
- (4) does not disguise, diminish or obscure important items, statements or warnings.

- 2.20 COBS 4.5.5G states that when communicating information, a firm should consider whether omission of any relevant fact will result in information being insufficient, unclear, unfair or misleading.

  - (2) refer eligible complainants in writing to the availability of these summary details, at, or immediately after, the point of sale; and
  - (3) provide such summary details in writing to eligible complainants:
    - (a) on request; and

  - (c) informs the complainant that he may now refer the complaint to the Financial Ombudsman Service; and
  - (d) encloses a copy of the Financial Ombudsman Service standard explanatory leaflet.

2.29 DISP 1.2.16R (in force from 2002-2007) provides that complaints should be investigated by an employee of sufficient competence who, where appropriate, was not directly involved in the matter which is the subject of the complaint.
